Things seem like they're finally looking up for listless thirtysomething Bridget when she scores a job as a nanny for precocious six-year old Frances—only Frances is not so keen on her new caregiver. But as the relationship between Frances's moms hits the rocks and Bridget faces an unexpected pregnancy of her own, the nanny and her charge find they can lean on each other. Rogerebert.com called this affecting comedy "truly refreshing...beautifully done."

Ask Andrew

Tuesday, March 24

This week, Andrew talks about Alfred Hitchcock's Notorious (1946) (spoiler alert) and why there are so many film company credits at the beginning of films.

Do you have a question about the movies, maybe something you've often wondered about but never had a chance to ask anyone? Well, now's your chance. Ask Andrew J. Douglas, Ph.D., BMFI's Senior Director of Education and Administration, and he will post a video on Tuesday that answers the most interesting questions (that he knows the answers to).
