

Until 4 years ago, Josephine Olson hid her learning disabilities.

She worried that her peers would see her accommodations for dyslexia as "cheating."

She was afraid they wouldn't realize how hard she had to work, to get her outstanding grades.

Most of all, she feared that because of the stigma still attached to learning disabilities, people wouldn't believe she could succeed.

But the support of people like you empowered her to embrace her identity as a student with LD

"Winning Special Recognition for the Fred J. Epstein Youth Achievement Award in 2018 became a turning point in my life," she says. "For the first time, I was proud of my identity as a student with a learning disability."

"I cannot express enough how thankful I am"

Graduating from Boston University last May, she is applying to law school to help other students with LD access the resources they need to unlock their potential.

Please join us to help more students like Josephine learn to be proud of themselves!

---

Donate Here